British Headquarters in France,
June 14 (via London)—The operations
in the vicinity of Ypres have passed into a new and, for the British, a most satisfactory stage. The Canadians yesterday retook the greater part of the ground lost on June 2, including the Armagh Wood and Observatory Ridge, and the British front line has returned to its original position. The German losses were large and the latest reports show about 150 prisoners, including four officers in British hands.

The attack began at 2 a.m., the ground was quickly gained, and by noon the situation was comparatively quiet. The Germans apparently did not anticipate so speedy and determined a counter-attack and abundant evidence was found of the destructive effects of the British artillery fire, which had quite prevented them from properly consolidating the position
during their occupation of the disputed ground. Whether the British shall choose to hold the old line, now almost destroyed, cannot be said, but it seems assured that the option now rests with them. At any rate, the operation was a most gallant and successful incident, in which the Canadians amply repaid any debt they ow-ed the Germans. The outcome has caused great rejoicing in the ranks of the Canadians.

It was after two weeks of the most unseasonable cold, rainy weather known to the oldest inhabitants of this region, making the low ground around the Ypres salient a morass, that the Canadians charged in the midst of a downpour at 1.30 o'clock in the morning and recovered Observatory Ridge and Mount Sorrel, important high ground which was still held by the Germans after the first stage of the battle of Ypres on June 2-3. So heavy and continuous had been the British artillery fire on the Germans, vainly trying to fortify Mount Sorrel during their ten days' occupation, that they had been unable to remove the munitions and foodstores left there.

"We were delighted with the way
the guns supported us," says the Canadians. "They gave the Germans a taste of their own Verdun tactics. We are getting Lord George's munitions
now, all right.

A German officer who was taken

What do you suppose appeals to the more elderly people? Just the solid comfort. This car, unlike most of the smaller and popular-priced makes, has none of that stiffness or rigidity

about it. Deep, soft, divan upholstery and shock-absorbing cantilever springs take all the stiffness out and put all the comfort in.

Large tires (4-inch) also add mater-

car. Also, and just as important, they help keep upkeep at a minimum.

Another thing to remember. This

It's the little conveniences that on the Russian front. That may in part explain why the Austrians are still surrendering in thousands there. Germany no longer rules the roost in the Baltic. Off the Swedish coast to the southwest of Stockholm a naval engagement took place on Tuesday night that resulted in the sinking of the German cruiser auxiliary Koenig von Sachsen, a destroyer and twelve merchantmen under convoy. The German vessels, together with a number of armed trawlers, were attacked suddenly by Russian destroyers and submarines, and suffered severely in the action that followed. A trawler has reached the Swedish port of Nykoping with 150 survivors. The Koenig von Sachsen was reported there to have sunk with all hands. Berlin, officially announcing the action, says the vessel destroyed was the auxiliary cruiser Herzmann, and that her commander and most of her crew was saved. She was attacked by four destroyers. The difference in the name given by Berlin and that contained in the Swedish report is probably due to the fact that the vessel was renamed when she became an auxiliary cruiser. It is not at all likely that two German auxiliary cruisers were sunk on Tuesday night off the Swedish coast. It is announced that Russia, having added materially by the completion of her building program to her strength in the Baltic, will carry on aggressive naval warfare there during the season of navigation. The statement that several British Dreadnoughts have recently entered the Baltic is a fairy story not to be believed. Britain can help best there with submarines.

PLANS FOR IRELAND.

Lloyd George's Proposals Are Likely to Go Into Effect.

DUBLIN, June 13.—An official report issued by the Nationalist party concerning its recent meeting gives the history of the situation resulting from Premier Asquith's visit to Ireland and the appointment of David Lloyd George to negotiate a settlement of the differences between the Irish factions.

The statement says Premier Asquith returned from Ireland profoundly convinced that the castle government was completely broken down, and that he made no attempt to set it up again by the appointment of either a Lord-Lieutenant or a Chief Secretary for Ireland. It gives the proposals of Mr. Lloyd George, formulated on his own responsibility as a result of his consultations with all the parties, which may be regarded as the Government's proposals. The proposals were:

"First, to bring the Home Rule Act into immediate operation; second, to introduce forthwith an amending bill as a strictly war emergency act; third, that during the interim the Irish members were to remain in Westminster in their full numbers; fourth, that during the war emergency period the six Ulster counties should remain under the Imperial Government; fifth, that immediately after the war an Imperial conference of representatives of all dominions be held to consider the future government of the Empire, including the government of Ireland; and, sixth, that following this conference and in the interval provided by the War Emergency Act a permanent settling of all great outstanding problems would be proceeded with.

The foregoing proposals were set out briefly in a speech at the Nationalist meeting by John Redmond, who added that no conference had yet been held between the opposing parties, each side submitting proposals to its own supporters.

HUGHES IS CHOSEN.

He is Nominated by Old Line Republicans for Presidency.

CHICAGO, June 13.—For President: Charles Evans Hughes, of New York.

Vice-President: Charles Warren Fairbanks, of Indiana.

With this ticket nominated Saturday afternoon, after the collapse of peace negotiations with the Progressive party, the Republicans entered the campaign of 1916.

Judge Hughes was named on the third ballot, the first and only one taken on Saturday, receiving 949½ votes; Colonel Roosevelt received 18½; Lodge 7, Dupont 5, Weeks 3, and LaFollette 3.

For Vice-President, Fairbanks was chosen on the first ballot for Vice-President, receiving 863 votes. Former Senator Burkett of Nebraska received 108; Senator Borah of Idaho 7, Governor Johnson of California 2, and Wm. Grant Webster 2.

The appearance of harmony and unity within the party was presented when, just before the convention adjourned at 2 p.m., the nominations were made unanimous. It was acclamation without heartiness, without zest, without enthusiasm.

GOT THROUGH BARRAGE

Stretcher-Bearers Performed Gallant Service.

Chaplain Returned to London, Eng., From Front Describes Third Battle of Ypres—Eyewitness Says Canadians, Although Under Terrible Fire, Clung to Ruined Trenches and Drove Back Enemy.

LONDON, June 13.—The Rev. Captain R. C. McGillivray, of Antigonish, chaplain of an Ontario brigade, sails for Canada this week on a short leave of absence owing to his father's illness. He was an eye-witness at a distance of the great battle which lasted two days recently. The brigade to which he was attached found it impossible to join in the fight owing to the enemy's artillery barrage fire, which encircled and effectually isolated some of the troops engaged.

The thunder of the artillery was deafening, though some miles away, and a great cloud of smoke by day and fire by night filled the sky.

Burials were impossible, but ambulances with stretcher bearers pierced the line of barrage at great peril from time to time, and succeeded in getting many of the wounded to the base hospital.

Eyewitness' Story.

OTTAWA, June 13.—The following communique has been received from the Canadian general representative at the front:

Canadian Corps Headquarters in France, via London, June 12.—During the first week of the month heavy fighting occurred on the Canadian front. Early in the morning of June 2nd the enemy opened a tremendous bombardment over the area of our left division.

The weight of fire was greater than any hitherto experienced by the Canadian troops, and in spite of the retaliation of our artillery continued in steadily increasing volume for four hours.

The front and support trenches were severely damaged and in many places obliterated. Entanglements were destroyed. The smoke and fumes of thousands of bursting shells, high explosives, gas and lachrymatory, hung heavily in the air.

SUCCESES FOR BRITISH.

Two Forces Have Won Victories in German East Africa.

LONDON, June 13.—British troops invading German East Africa from the north have captured Momb, a town on the railroad in the Usambara district of German East Africa, while another British force operating from Rhodesia has occupied the town of Bismarekburg, on the south-eastern shore of Lake Tanganyika. The text of the British official statement announcing these successes says:

"East Africa—The Pangani River has been bridged at Mikotsheni. Further progress has been made in the Usambara district. Mazinde has been reached and the Momb station has been captured. Myalamo has been occupied. Major-Gen. van Deventer is engaging the Germans east of Kondoa Irangi.

MATHESON, June 13.—While attempting to cross Moose Lake in a canoe during a heavy storm on June 2, A. J. Bateman and Ben Slee, two lumbermen, were upset and drowned before assistance could reach them. The accident was witnessed by a Mr. Rice on the shore, who endeavored to go to the rescue, but the men had gone down for the last time before he could reach them. Bateman's body was found last Monday, while a search is still being made for Slee.

A. J. Bateman lived on Kenilworth avenue, Toronto, prior to coming north about two years ago. His father and mother also reside here.

Italian Offensive Making Progress.

ROME, June 13.—Austro-Hungarian troops, 12,000 strong, Sunday attacked in massed formation the Italian positions on Monte Lemirle, but were repulsed with heavy losses, says the Italian official statement given out here Sunday. The Italian offensive recently started between the Adige River and Brenta, the statement adds, is making progress at several points.

Major-General M. S. Mercer, C.B., and Brig-General V. A. S. Williams had arranged to inspect certain front works Sunday morning. The generals were caught in the bombardment and unfortunately both are missing. It is reported that when last seen General Mercer had been struck on the head by a flying sandbag and General Williams wounded in the face.

All along the line our troops clung to their shattered trenches with the greatest gallantry. When the bombardment ceased the enemy advanced and everywhere encountered desperate resistance. At various points there was fierce hand-to-hand fighting. Officers and men rivaled each other in heroism.

Our losses were heavy, but the Germans paid a high price for every captured trench.

Local counter-attacks were quickly organized. As a result some of the lost ground was recovered and a new line established.

The following morning an organized counter-attack still further improved our position.

In order to take part in this operation some of our battalions were obliged to move across the open under intense shell fire and through heavy barrages. Nowhere did the line waver. Each battalion advanced and carried through its appointed task with splendid dash and undiminished determination.

Since then sections of our defences have been subjected at intervals to heavy bombardments. At one or two points the enemy has attempted to attack but in each case has been repulsed with loss.

The following awards have been made to officers and men for gallantry on the occasion of a German raid on our trenches during the month of May:

Distinguished Service Order: Lieut.-Colonel W. A. Griedbach, 49th Battalion.

Distinguished Conduct Medal: Color-Sergt.-Major C. Miles.

Military Medal: Sergt. J. Wallis, Corporal F. Bennett, Private A. I. McKinnon, Private G. W. Tomkinson.

The Age of Quickness.

The modern wife placed two plates with knives, forks, spoons and tumblers on the dining room table and took two paper napkins from a drawer, laying one beside each plate.

Then she lighted the gas stove, opened a can of soup and placed it in a skillet to heat. Next she opened two cans of vegetables and a can of salmon and heated these. She cut six slices of baker's bread and quartered a baker's pie, placing everything on the table, together with butter, salt, pepper and a pitcher of cold water.

"John," she said briskly, "your dinner's ready."

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, June 12.—Outside of a little business being worked in Manitoba barley for export, the market was very quiet. Oats were in better demand locally. Flour was quiet, but steady. Mill-feed was quiet; so was butter. Cheese was firm and eggs were steady.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, June 12.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 111 carloads.

A feature of the day was the sale of two extra choice cattle weighing about 1850 lbs. by the commission house of Corbett-Hall-Coughlin Company to the Harris Abattoir Company for the unprecedented figure of $10.75 straight. The pair were consigned to Corbett-Hall by W. E. Henderson of Lucknow, but the price could not be regarded as constituting a precedent for further sales at the same price.

The market, however, was a very active one and prices were not over a cent anywhere from 10 to 20c over the close of last week, about 2½c above last Monday's. Good straight loads of out-breds were in demand from $9 to $9.50 per cwt. Representatives of all the commission houses said the trade was strong in all lines, and it was noticeable that, while there were no spectacular advances, if we except the three or four choice lots, prices hovered more around the $10 mark than before. The quality of the cattle offering, too, was said to be on the whole excellent, though as in every market there were many lots that should have remained in the farmers' hands for another month or so. Very few grass cattle were offered and the run of stall-fed was heavy for this season of the year.

Stockers are not in very big supply, but it was said that there was no great inquiry for that class and probably the supply about equaled the demand. Sheep, lambs and calves were all strong and the trade was steady at unchanged prices. The hog packer's quotations were from 10c to 15c lower.

COL. J. W. ALLISON AND THE COMMISSION

There is little reason to doubt that Colonel John Wesley Allison, with slight but convenient intermissions of memory and lapses of health when the questions got too searching and the answers need editing, is prepared to tell the Duff-Meredith Commission all the truth he thinks is good for it.

Colonel John Wesley Allison is a short, sallow man with long, plaintive eyelashes, a regular Cobalt lay-out of silver hair which he parts in the middle to preserve his balance, and a moustache which droops from the weight of evidence it shelters. The Colonel talks in a tired voice and is somewhat careless of the King's English. Unlike Colonel David Carnegie, he is no hide-bound grammarian. His singular subjects and plural verbs show an amount of disloyalty to each other which is fairly astonishing in the patriot Sir Sam painted him to be.

Whatever the Colonel may look in uniform he appears ordinary enough in his neat sack suit of bartender's blue. And yet he is a highly important person surrounded by auriferous influences, a Midas whose touch turns everything to gold, said touch being always and everywhere at work from ten per cent. up. In fact he is so important a person that Benjamin Franklin Yoakum, that general old Wall Street buccaneer who can smell money miles off, paid $25,000 just to sit near him. An impression had got abroad somehow that Allison was a miracle worker, that he had found the gold at the rainbow's end, that his divining rod invariably located hidden treasure, in short that he had tremendous pull somewhere with somebody and that he was a good man to get next to.

Colonel John Wesley Allison seems to have realized his special gifts himself. At all events he cashed in on them to the extent of sharing commissions with many groups and combinations, said groups and combinations doing all the work of landing or filling contracts while the Colonel provided the influence. Let nobody underrate this influence of the Colonel's. Without it no contracts detached themselves from the parent stem. With it contracts fell into one's lap like overripe cherries. It was the Colonel's job to shake the tree and shake it he did, well and often.

Whence did this wonderful influence of the Colonel's come? Was it born with him or did he have it thrust upon him? Was he such an outstanding figure that the British, Russian, French and Canadian Governments simply made a grab for him or did his name have to be mentioned to them? Why this sudden confidence on the part of three great powers in a tin colonel unknown to fame save as Sir Sam's friend? The evidence before the Duff-Meredith Commission does not go into these matters, but it is an interesting subject just the same. Suffice it to say that Colonel John Wesley had had a wonderful and meteoric career since he first blazed on war's horizon two years ago. Like beat innocence like that? Una and the Lion have nothing on Sir Sam and his John Wesley Allison.

According to the Colonel Allison's evidence he was partner in a number of "gentleman's agreements" to take all that was coming to them, including the "gentleman's agreement" between himself, Yoakum and Lignanti, which was not signed, but which was nevertheless carried out. Our experience of a "gentleman's agreement" is that it is generally an agreement to skin a louse for its hide and tallow and that gentlemen act advisedly when they carry out the agreement, but refuse to sign their names to it. It looks better that way.

Colonel Allison has also explained that the commission of $200,000 set aside for him when Yoakum, Cadwell and Bassick split a million dollars between them was a genuine surprise. We have noticed the same thing on the farm. The hen always voices surprise when she lays an egg.

HIS GRIM, BLUNT HUMOR

Expected to Die in Bed—Plain Words Crushed Slackers—An Inner Peep at the Man

The late Earl Kitchener as driver of men and hater of women is the principal in many stories, but there are so many strange little sides to his big nature and so many defiant contradictions in his character that only a variety of stories about him can make the Sirdar, the volunteer of 1870, the creator of the new armies, live again. The Kitchener legend is already in existence and it is illustrated with countless stories. His character had to be legendary for tactiturnity hid the real man. On his visit to America several years ago, it was said that Lord Kitchener made a very favorable impression, not by what he said but by his astonishing power of saying nothing and his imperturbable demeanor. He could be silent in a crowd and yet not feel uncomfortable.

Silence Awed Japan

When Kitchener visited Manchuria and Japan upon the expiration of his command in India, 1909, the Japanese laid themselves out to impress him with various exhibitions of their military power, of which they were very reasonably proud. But the most imposing pageant in the world, its pompas and vanities, were as nothing in Kitchener's eyes. His hosts viewed his silence, his expressionless immobility, if with disappointment, at least with profound respect. It was, in fact, like their own ideal of impenetrable reserve, and, as a Far Eastern friend who was in Kitchener's entourage later said, Kitchener was regarded by the Japanese as the greatest European they had ever seen.

When Kitchener did talk of himself he made some mistakes. He was a fatalist, and on several occasions expressed some very strong convictions as to his future. During the Sudan campaign he was once warned not to expose himself so recklessly to the enemy while in action. To this remonstrance he replied: "I shall never be killed. When my time comes I shall die peacefully in my bed." But he died on duty on board a warship, in the face of the enemy and "with his boots on."

Would Never be Secretary

His friend, Mrs. Erskine, chronicles another bad piece of prophecy. "If there is ever a great war, and I happen to be War Secretary," he once said to me, "I'll make it a criminal offence to print unauthorized news. But if for fourteen years, and hit the goal at last."

It was characteristic of ventional a nature that hit to fortune and greatness of indiscipline. He was Alexandria on the eve of bombardment, and, knowing telegram recalling him to imminent, he arranged with press-man to delay its hands until the weekly board had gone.

Minerva from Jupiter's brain seems to have stepped forth full-armed and been a business success from the start.

Nothing occurred at any stage of the game to contradict Colonel Allison's statements that he could deliver the goods. Shortly after the war started there was that little affair of the Colt's revolvers—a little affair with the Canadian Government in which Colonel Allison was all to the mustard. Not only did he succeed in selling the Militia Department of Canada Colt's revolvers in wholesale lot at $4.50 each more than retailers could get them for in lots of two, but the customs bars at Morrisburg were removed so as to let them and certain other bargains of a similar character in free. Thus Colonel Allison with his own hands, single and unaided, did all that the reciprocity movement failed to do in 1911—lowered the tariff barriers, lowered them moreover in the face of a Government that had said "Never, no never will we do such a thing." Is it any wonder that the Tobacco Crowd and the Wall Street Crowd and all the other crowds with their mouths watering over there in New York looked on and said "Allison's the man for our money?"

Then there was that little affair of the defective cartridges—three million rounds of 'em bought by Allison for $20.00 a thousand and sold for $25.00 a thousand to the British Admiralty. Even the great Vickers Company was brushed aside when Allison was negotiating that little deal. This seems to have been one case when Allison took in no middlemen. Two things stand out in this transaction—the British Admiralty's confidence in Colonel John Wesley Allison who was selling them. It only goes to show what a charm the Colonel exercised.

It is not necessary to go behind the Colonel's evidence before the Duff-Meredith Commission to show that Colonel John Wesley Allison was just as strong with the Russian and French Governments as he was with the British and Canadian. If his own words are not to be misconstrued he had considerable to do with the Russian order for eighty million dollars' worth of shells which is now being filled in Canada. At all events he seems to have horned in on the commissions. The Colonel's say-so would appear to be as effective in Petrograd as it was at the Horse Guards in Whitehall. That a man of Colonel John Wesley Allison's modest size should be so distinctly seen by war bureaucrats the world over is nothing short of marvelous. What does Dr. Watts say:—"The mind's the measure of the man." What a mind Colonel Allison must have to be visible at these long distances!

It seems a pity that after all these wonderful performances with foreign governments the Colonel should write himself down as less than the super-patriot Sir Sam described him to be. According to Sir Sam the Colonel was exercising his wonderful spell on was exercising his wonderful spell on his expense bills, but according to the Colonel his spell cost anything from ten per cent. up. But—mark that but—Sir Sam doesn't know anything about it. The Colonel was taking commissions going and coming, he was hand in glove with rolicking bands of war profiteers in at least five countries and Sir Sam didn't know anything about it. Can you

Sunday afternoon the enemy shelled the British trenches heavily on the southern portion from Hill 60 to a point 1,500 yards north. The bombardment was preceded by the shelling during the morning of the town of Ypres and the back area.

The only infantry action during the day on this front was an attempt by the enemy to rush one of the blocking posts of the British in Sanctuary wood. It was repulsed.

Sunday night, after a heavy bombardment of the British trenches between Thiepval, Blaumont, and Hamel, the enemy in the course of a raid in the Ancre valley was able to cut off a few men who formed part of a wiring party; five are missing.

On the remainder of the front there was nothing except minor trench mortar and artillery actions opposite Fricourt and south of Neuville-St. Vaast.

A Fokker was brought down near Eabourdin.

WHIRLIGIG BEETLES.

These Four Eyed, Six Legged Creatures Are Expert Swimmers.

More than likely you have watched him skating in "figures 8's" and all sorts of elaborate designs in quiet pools along a stream or on the edge of a lake. He will turn this way and that, describing one graceful curve after another, and then dart off in a straight line when he's frightened. He's speedy, as well as graceful. He's the whirligig beetle.

He has six legs, two longer ones in front and two pairs of short, flat paddles behind. These paddles make him an expert swimmer. His front legs, stretched out, look like arms.

Nature was also generous in giving him two pairs of eyes. With one pair he looks at objects on top of the water, and with the other pair he keeps watch for preying fish below.

There are something less than 300 species of whirligig beetles and they're scattered in all parts of the world. All summer you'll see their shiny bodies skating in spiral tracks and in curves on the surface of pools and sluggish streams.

The Mystery of a Duel.

Having fought his duel and saved his honor by firing a shot in the air, the editor of a French provincial newspaper went back to his desk, and the incident had quite left his mind when he felt something strange in his thigh. He looked and found that he was bleeding profusely. A doctor was called, who discovered that a bullet was imbedded in the editor's thigh some two inches deep and required extraction. "Why was this not taken notice of on the spot where the duel took place?" he asked. The editor was as much in the dark as the doctor. At the moment of the duel he had fired into the air, and his adversary also took a distracted sort of aim. The editor felt nothing as he left the field and had shaken hands with his antagonist as a sign of reconciliation. How a bullet came to be lodged in his thigh was simply one of the mysteries of dueling.

there is a great war,' he added, 'I am sure not to be War Secretary.'

Yet he died as War Secretary in the greatest of great wars, and in connection with his passing an ironical incident is being told. No one received a greater shock than did his sister, Mrs. Parker. On the morning of the fatal announcement she was engaged in a stall in Caledonian Market where a bazaar was being held for war charities, and had for sale autographed photographs of her famous brother. One of these photographs which had been in the possession of Queen Mary was offered at auction and brought $100.

Genial With Canadians

Nowhere was the news of Kitchener's tragic end received with more deep consternation and sorrow than in the Canadian camps in England, where several times he undertook the inspection of forces sent overseas. A week before his death his Lordship entertained a large party of wounded soldiers at his beautiful residence in Broome Park. Included were a number of Canadians, with several of whom he shook hands and chatted genially. The general impression of Kitchener being an unbending martinet is dismissed by those who, like the Canadians referred to, have met him in semi-privacy.

Kitchener's was a grim, laconic humor. "What is your taste in hair pins?" he once asked a dandified officer. But his chief characteristic was industry and around his work and his getting others to work centre most of the Kitchener stories. His capacity for work was amazing. It was characteristic of him that his first question when he entered the War Office as Secretary for War was: "Is there a bed in the building?" "No, sir," replied an official. "Then get one," said Lord Kitchener. During the South African war he seldom had more than three or four hours' sleep a day, rising regularly at 4 or 5 o'clock in the morning and working hard until night. Those who knew Lord Kitchener in his boyhood say that he early displayed that taciturnity for which he was celebrated throughout his life, and a great talent for figures which led him to enter the Royal Engineers in 1871 upon the completion of his course at Woolwich. "E's no talker; not 'im," said a Cockney non-commissioned officer of him once, and added, "E's all steel and h'ice."

Wept Over Gordon

Long years after Gordon perished at Khartoum, Sirdar Kitchener re-took the city in triumph after Omdurman and gave the martyr Christian burial. The scene is sketched by Stevens as follows: "The troops formed up before the palace on three sides of a rectangle. The Sirdar, the Generals of division and brigade, and the staff stood in the open space facing the palace. The Sirdar raised his hand. A pull on the halliards; up ran, out flew the Union Jack. "Three cheers for the Queen!" cried the Sirdar; helmets leaped in the air, and the melancholy ruins woke to the first wholesome shout of all these years. Then came forward the pipers and wailed a dirge, and the Sudanese band played 'Abide With Me.' Perhaps lips did twitch just a little to see the ebony heathens fervently blowing out Gordon's favorite hymn; but the most irresistible incongruity would hardly have made us laugh. And there were those who said the cold Sirdar himself could hardly speak or see, as General Hunter and the rest stepped out and shook his hand. What wonder? He had trodden this road to Khartoum

Stories of Kitchener's semi-humorous bluntness are legion. "Sorry to report the loss of five men through explosion of dynamite," was the gist of a telegram he received one day during the Boer war from a captain at the front. "Do you want any more dynamite?" was the immediate answer. On one occasion to the War Office authorities were pressing a certain weapon upon him. "Keep the gun," he wired. "I can throw stones myself."

"Twelve hours in which to carry this despatch?" he remarked to an officer on one occasion. "You must do it in six." And the officer did it in five.

Gave Little Friend a Doll

Yet this man, "the man of iron," or "the Sudan machine," as great correspondents called him, had a human side, as the narratives of Mrs. Erskine show. Mrs. J. S. Erskine, widow of a former captain of the 10th Royal Hussars, who was for a time attached to the staff of Lord Kitchener, recently gave an interview in which she discussed the man on whom the Empire was relying. At her first meeting of Lord Kitchener she was a lass of four, in short skirts and blouse. When he died she was in the neighborhood of 40. "I was at the engineering depot at Woolwich with my parents when I first saw the then Engineer Kitchener," said Mrs. Erskine. "He was most shy and diffident, but I wasn't. In truth I was just the opposite, and probably that is the reason we became fast friends. Not long after that when he was called to Egypt, he gave me a doll, and I treasured it many years."

Those Women ! !

Lord Kitchener's only retreat was orderly, but still a retreat. It occurred in London not so long after Royal honors had been conferred upon him by Queen Victoria, whose hand he kissed, although, as he later said, "it was a long way down to reach it." On the day of the retreat the general had been feted at a dozen affairs and finally wound up at a tea where Mrs. Erskine was one of the guests. When he saw his old friend he rushed to her. "Talk to me! Please talk to me! Never mind what you say, but say something just as though it were important," he begged me," said Mrs. Erskine. "So I talked to him about nothing, and finally managed to ask him what had disturbed him. 'It's those two women over there,' he said, pointing to a couple of grande dames. 'They have been following me all the afternoon, and I didn't think I ever would escape.'"

One day Kitchener, Capt. Erskine, the latter's wife, and others were visiting friends in Colchester, and ate heartily of greengage plums. "The general saw me devouring quantities, and finally took me to task," said Mrs. Erskine. "Don't you eat another one of those," he commanded. "Why?" I asked. 'Because you'll get the stomach ache,' he replied gravely. 'So will you,' I responded, 'for you have eaten quite as many as have I.' 'I know that,' he replied, 'for I've got it already. That's why I'm trying to save you.'"

formerly United States Ambassador to Great Britain. "I think he was in his right place at the head of the British War Office. I believe this calamity will stimulate the British people to increased effort until their final triumph is won."
"I knew him," said Capt. Gaunt,
British Naval Attache at New York,
"as a wonderful organizer of British armies, who could discipline men and put them into the field. By some his achievements in this direction are held to surpass his exploits in the field."
Kitchener went to South Africa in the black days, when Britain had suffered a series of defeats—Stormberg, Magersfontein, Colenso—and Britain's military supremacy was in grave danger. And how the "gentlemen" of the ranks, and others, hated his methods.
Soon letters were arriving in London complaining of his arbitrary ways. He was "making himself hated everywhere"; "insulting voluntary officers of noble birth daily"; "ruining the organization," and so on. But never a word from Kitchener until he broke the silence with the laconic despatch,
"Send me more men." And with these hundreds of thousands he won through as he would have done in his own time with the millions whom he called to "Kitchener's army" in the Great War.

KING'S OWN SERVANTS CHARGED INTO DEATH

Few Survivors of Company of Sandringham's Heroes—An Epic of Gallipoli is Described

Of all the tales of gallantry told, and yet to be told, of the desperate fighting in Gallipoli, none perhaps will surpass the heroism of the Norfolk Territorials, with whom the King's Sandringham servants went to fight. Of them Sir Ian Hamilton wrote in his now historic despatch: "Among these ardent souls was part of a fine company enlisted from the King's Sandringham estates. Nothing more was ever seen or heard of any of them. They charged into the forest and were lost to sight or sound." Writing of that magnificent charge into the "misty unknown," a correspondent from King's Lynn says: "It is a story of the men who never came back; of Colonel Beauchamp and sixteen officers who led 250 men across ploughed open fields, thinking of nothing but the order, 'Anafarta must be taken by dusk.' To-day only a dozen, it would seem, are alive as wounded prisoners in Turkish hands, some day to tell a tale, perhaps, that will add a silver lining to one of the most glorious but saddest records of the British army.

"It is a breathless story. Think of every eligible man from the King's Sandringham estates enlisting in a body and forming a nucleus of a company; men whose wildest 'thrills' had been talk of a recalcitrant bull on the Royal estate. Others from office stool and counter. Twelve months of skilled training, in which Colonel Beauchamp was a past master. A pleasant cruise across open blue sea aboard the Aquitania, and a midnight landing on an enemy's unknown and unmapped coast. 'Anafarta must be taken by dusk.' That was the responsibility entrusted to them. For more than two and a half miles, across open country which would not shelter a field mouse, these Norfolk neophytes to gunfire charged. Maybe it was the very gallantry of these super-heroes that was their undoing. The Turks could not face that thin line of glittering Norfolk steel. They broke and fled.

"Bold and confident, Colonel Beauchamp, waving a simple Nilgherri bane, outpaced his men. 'On, the Norfolks, on!' 'Come on, the Holy Boys!' and 'Forward, the Hungry Ninth!' came the resounding echo from these ardent souls close upon their leader's heels. The fighting grew hotter; the Norfolks came into a terrible enflaming fire on both sides. Shrapnel and machine guns swept the earth bare of those men whom the Turkish infantry could not face. Exhausted by thirst and decimated by the fire, into the woods they continued. And then—who knows? Only twelve survive, and they are wounded prisoners.

"So to-day the little village of West Newton and Deringham and the cottages of the King's estates are all in mourning. Gardeners, keepers and woodmen have paid the great sacrifice. Aching hearts are scarcely less heavy because the King himself has tried again and again to secure a release from suspense. These women, materially, want for nothing. Every family receives from the King the same pay as if its man was at home."

HISTORY REPEATING ITSELF

(By Joseph Hocking)

More than a hundred years ago, when Napoleon threw a black shadow over Europe, the liberties of the whole Continent were threatened. But the faith and dogged pluck of the army and navy, of the men who followed Wellington and Nelson, saved us and saved Europe then. To-day the liberties and well-being of Europe are again threatened. History is, indeed, repeating itself, and the England who fought for the liberty of the world at the beginning of the nineteenth century is again fighting for the liberty of the world at the beginning of the twentieth. Napoleon was crushed, his dreams were shattered, his great army became fugitive, and his bombastic threatenings were of no more weight than the anger of a pining child. What England was, English is; we have not lost the resolution, the foresight, the power of execution, nor the faith, which has made our nation great. We have still the same strong arm, the same keen eye, the same brave heart, the same clear brain, as when our cause was, as it is to-day, the liberty and the well-being of the world.

The "Echo de Paris" received details from Corfu of the loss of the French torpedo boat destroyer Renaudin in the Adriatic. The vessel was cruising when an explosion cut the ship in two. While the survivors were struggling in the water a large submarine of a new type appeared. The officers and sailors remained indifferent to the agony of the swimmers. A French torpedo boat destroyer cruising in the neighborhood hastened to the scene, whereupon the submarine disappeared. The destroyer took the thirty-eight men rescued to Brindisi.

Prince of Wales in Cairo

The Prince of Wales' visit to Egypt resulted in many beggars of Cairo blessing his name, though he is ignorant of the fact. A correspondent saw the Prince making some purchases in the bazaar, and, when the business was concluded, he approached the merchant and asked him if he knew whom he had had the honor of serving. The merchant shook his head, and when informed of the truth he burst into loud lamentations. He had shamelessly overcharged the Prince, and nothing could convince that he could not suffer an ignominious death. The correspondent promised that if the merchant distributed largesse to the poor in the Prince's name he himself would personally intercede with the Prince on the merchant's behalf. The merchant thankfully agreed.

The Dead in India.

Three distinct methods of disposing of the dead are in vogue in India. While the Mohammedans inter the dead, the Hindus prefer to throw the bodies into the purifying waters of the Ganges, and even now there are constant infractions of the severe regulations framed to suppress this dangerous practice. The form of funeral adopted by the Parsees is that of simply exposing their dead at a great altitude to the scavenging services of crows and vultures.

Imprisonment For Debt.

About the middle of the last century the power of imprisoning a debtor for life was taken from the creditor, and it fills one with amazement to think that a system so ridiculous should have continued as long as it did. The three principal debtors' prisons in England were the King's Bench, the Marshalsea and the Borough Compter. In the year 1750 there were 20,000 prisoners for debt in Great Britain and Ireland. The utility of the system was quite as great as its barbarity. More than half the prisoners in some of the prisons were kept there solely because they could not pay the attorneys' costs. Many prisoners had their wives and children with them. There was no infirmary, no resident surgeon and no bath.—Dundee Advertiser.

Massacres Hypocritically Upon Armenians

President of the London Committee describes the Turkish massacres as follows: The massacres, in which it is estimated that from 800,000 to 1,000,000 Armenians have perished, or are destined to perish, represent the extermination of a race. A quarter of a million Armenians in Asia Minor does not allow that the Young Turks make away with them in any exception of the Armenians of Constantinople, Smyrna and two other ports. The Armenians had been in the hands of the executioners by the Entente Powers, with the Russian Government; that their whole country was a measure of repressive military necessity, repressive measures were taken against the Armenians when they rose in places in the war zone and with the enemy. In fact, the deportation from places widely replete with the theatre of war commenced as early as April, and since then the systematic massacre of the able-bodied males, leaving the remainder of the population deprived of their laborers. The residue consisted of old men, children, were uprooted and sent across the great majority of the survivors reached the deserts of the Eastern progress of these at the mercy of their escorts or of the savages who attacked them affords one of the most ghastly in history.

The writer, who spent two months in an official position, say that, even in the worst condition was also treatable. They were treated and inferior race, and her justice nor protection hope lay in internal hope, never realized of determined Turkish or could they look for as could the Greeks and rescue them from Turkish

A letter has been received from Headquarters of the Canadian Red Cross Society acknowledging a box shipped May 31st. The box contained the following:—188 pair socks; 6 pair pyjamas; 6 helpless jackets; 6 bed jackets; 2 doz. surgical towels; 1 doz. covers; 6 fomentation cloths; 175 mouth wipes; 21 doz. regular sized bandages; 2 doz. 3-inch bandages; 11 cotton sponges; 6 wash cloths; 5 pillows.

As the war increases in magnitude and awfulness so the needs of our voluntary Red Cross work are growing more urgent. Subscriptions to the general funds of our Society will be very gratefully received by Mrs. Herbert Daly or Miss Etna Baker.

Those who are anticipating attending Napanee's annual celebration on Dominion Day will learn with pleasure that the Red Cross Society intend adding to the accommodations of the town by dispensing all kinds of dainty refreshments from attractive booths in the Driving Park. The Finance committee have charge of the arrangements.

On Saturday, June 17th, the work room will be open as usual all day. Light refreshments will be served during the afternoon.

LETTER FROM MRS. W. H. WILKISON.

The following letter, enclosing $50, was received by Mrs. George Thompson, Secretary of the Red Cross Society:—

Hotel Suisse, Montreux, Switzerland, May 20th, 1916.
Dear Mrs. Thompson:

I am much pleased over receiving my Canadian Red Cross Pin, in fact, so much so, that I am sending you another $50 in the hope that I will get another pin! As I might lose this one, and always wishing to wear one, I would like an extra one—will be sorry if anything should ever happen to this, but accidents will happen in the best regulated families.

There are great demands here in one's purse for all war work, as all the Red Cross Societies are represented except the German and Austrian, (this is French Switzerland), and as we are all fighting for the same cause one must give a helping hand to all.

one must give a helping hand to all. There are teas and entertainments all the time. I do not belong to the British Red Cross now, as I prefer giving directly and then I know the people who are assisted.

There are now a great many prisoners of war in Switzerland, only French and German so far, but English ones are expected soon, and 200 of them are to breakfast at this hotel on their way up to the Mountain. There are no prisoners of war billeted in Montreux but they are in the Mountain resorts just above here. When they are well enough to come down they brighten the streets with their bright uniforms. At first it was of a very mongrel description, even German coats, but the French government have sent many new ones. When they arrive their underwear is always in a very worn out condition, but is soon replenished by the Red Cross and Patriotic admirers. By June their will be over 10,000 prisoners in various parts of Switzerland. I wonder if there will be any Canadians amongst the British lot; if so, I will find them out. I never knew how clannish Canadians were until I came to a foreign country and met some of them!

There is no hurry about the pen. I will be leaving here next month for the summer, but anything is always forwarded to me.

Wishing the Napanee Red Cross Society every success.

Yours sincerely,

CALCULATING COWS.

In virtually any dairy district, probably among the herds supplying one factory, it is possible to find contrasts running something like this: one herd of 14 cows gives on the average 7,732 lb. milk and 243 lb. fat, while a neighbor's herd of 14 cows averages only 4,037 lb. milk and 155 lb. fat. Indeed, in looking over the records in eleven districts the average difference between the high herd averages and the low ones amounted to 4,639 lb. milk and 140 lb. fat per cow. This is certainly an extraordinary difference, and indicates that it will pay to calculate what cows can do.

Take it another way: in 1914, sixty patrons of two creameries began this cow calculation, cow testing. It was found in 1915 that their herds had made a gain over their 1913 record of 71 pounds of fat per cow, a gain of eight per cent. But on the other hand the 1913 patrons of the same two creameries who did not go in for cold calculations fell off 87 pounds of fat per cow, seventeen per cent.

If the men not cow testing had made gains with their cows in the two years, as those made who were testing, it would have meant an increase in the output of 58,362 pounds of butter!

It pays to test. Record forms are furnished free of charge on application to the Dairy Division, Ottawa.

CANADIANS DASHED OUT TO MEET THE ENEMY

London, June 12.—The correspondent of The Daily Chronicle with the British armies in the field, describing the attack on the Canadian front of the Ypres salient on June 2, gives many instances of Canadian heroism under the terrific German onslaught. He says:

"Altho the order for retirement had been given, single figures here and there were seen to go over the broken parapets and go forward to meet the enemy half way. They died to a man fighting."

"The officer in command of one of the support companies brought several men out of a trench, but did not follow on. He turned again, facing the enemy, and was last seen as he fired a revolver and then flung it into a German's face."

DARED FOE TO ATTACK.

"Near the place called Cumberland dugout was a small square between the trenches, and here Col. Shaw, commanding a battalion of Canadian riflemen, collected a small party of men and made a last stand against the enemy, who had worked round thru a gap in the rear, and advanced upon him. They fought it out there, each man with any weapon that remained to him—a bomb, bayonet, revolver, or trench spade. The Canadians called to the Germans, daring them to come on. There were fierce shouts, louder than the cries of the wounded and the last groans of the men who fell."

"The Germans were kept at bay some time, but flung their bombs into the square."

"Very few remained alive, and when only eight were still fighting among the bodies of their comrades, these tattered and blood-splashed men, standing there fiercely contemptuous of the enemy and death, were ordered to retire by the last officer among them."

SOLDIER'S SACRIFICE.

"There were many acts of self-sacrifice done by the Canadian lads. I

HOW THE WARSPITE CAME THRU FIGHT

LONDON, June 11.—In proof of the statement of the British Admiralty that the dreadnought Warspite arrived safely in port after the North Sea battle, the commander of the Warspite himself has received an Associated Press correspondent and described his vessel's "miraculous escape" from the concentrated German fire.

"I am still commander of the greatest battleship in the world, and my men are as fit as Nelson's bluejackets," said the officer, Captain E. M. Phillpotts. The captain granted the interview on his return from Buckingham Palace, where he told King George the story of his part in the great naval battle.

Captain Phillpotts was very modest and minimized his own part in the battle, but he was full of praise for his men and what he termed the amazing powers of resistance of his ship.

"I am not surprised that there have been reports that the Warspite was sunk," he said, "as from our position between our fleet and the German battleships, our escape from such a fate was simply miraculous. Several times we disappeared from sight in the smoke and spray. Even some of our own officers on other ships believed the gallant battleship had sunk. As we left the fighting line we disappeared in a complete veil of spray."

"The division of battleships of which the Warspite was one was with the battle cruisers. We were practically engaged as soon as they were, but the Warspite did not fire until a few minutes after the others had been in action as I was not satisfied with the range at first."

"We soon knew we were up against the whole German battle fleet, but it was our business to engage them as fully as possible until Admiral Jellicoe could come up."

TO BUSY TO WATCH.

"You ask me what results I saw that our fire had on the Germans, but it is quite impossible to give a definite reply as the captain of one of a row of battleships about 500 yards apart, steaming in battle line, must keep an eye on the ship to make necessary swerves. The flag captain has some chance to see with some degree of accuracy what damage has been done to the enemy, but the others are too busy keeping their places in line and doing the damage to keep a glass to the eye to see what he is suffering."

"However, I saw that we registered hit after hit, enough to convince me that the Germans got a hiding which will keep them in port for many months to come. After two hours of action in much of which our division of battleships engaged the whole German battle fleet in an effort to protect our battle cruisers until Admiral Jellicoe came up, the Warspite's steering gear went wrong and she ran amuck among the enemy. It must have annoyed the German gunpointers exceedingly to attempt to gauge our erratic movements, for soon we were almost in the midst of the German battleships and well between them and our own battle line. I know of six

There were many acts of sacrifice done by the Canadian lads. I heard of one young private soldier from Kamsac, Saskatchewan. He had been crouching behind a shelter of some sandbags with one of his officers and an N.C.O., and the man was his best friend. All three men were wounded, and this young soldier from Kamsac had bandaged them, but his comrade was most badly wounded, and when the shell fire lifted and there was a chance of escape, it was utterly impossible to move him.

"The young soldier said, 'You go,' to the other wounded men, who were just able to walk, and then he sat down again by his comrade's side and said, 'I'm staying,' so he stayed with his friend.

CANADIANS TAKE BY STORM POSITIONS NEAR ZILLEBEKE

LONDON, June 14.—Canadian troops in what the British official statement describes as a "gallant and successful assault" southeast of Zillebeke, recaptured a former British position over a front of more than 1500 yards. Notwithstanding a severe shelling the Canadians retained the ground gained, the text of which is being consolidated.

The text of the statement follows: "At 10.30 in the morning the Canadian troops made a gallant and successful assault southeast of Zillebeke. Their objective was our old position in that neighborhood, all of which was captured on the front attacked, extending from the southern portion of Sanctuary Wood to a point about 1000 yards north of Hill 60, a total front of over 1500 yards.

"In the course of the assault heavy losses were inflicted on the enemy and three officers and 123 men were taken prisoner.

"Our troops were subjected to a severe shelling for several hours after gaining the position, but were well supported by our artillery and retain the ground gained, which is being consolidated. Heavy bombardments by the enemy continued during the day, to which our artillery replied effectively.

"Attempts of hostile infantry to counter-attack were frustrated by our artillery fire."

our own battle line. I know of six German battleships which concentrated their fire on the Warspite and there may have been others which I couldn't see.

NOT ONE VITAL INJURY.

"Under a worse pounding than the Lion received in the Doggerbank fight, we remained in action without a single vital injury, our chief difficulty being from the mishap to the steering gear. During our difficulties we received considerable credit for protecting the cruiser Warrior, which was practically helpless, but I must admit that sheer good fortune rather than intention was responsible for this, for the Warspite came across her bow while drifting and almost helpless.

"As I said before, the fact that we got out was an absolute miracle. Once repairs were quickly made we wanted to return, but found we were not popular. Sufficient battleships were present to fill the line and the possibility of our running amuck among our own friends was not welcomed. We steamed home.

"The Warspite will be sailing the seas months before the German fleet comes out again.

"My men were splendid. Their behavior was all I expected, but their baptism of fire has given them a feeling of confidence which will be a valuable asset to them when we go into action again.

"As for the general result of the action, the Germans were defeated and driven into their own ports with losses they can ill afford."

Napanee will celebrate Dominion Day on Monday, July 3rd, at the Driving Park. A good programme is being arranged.

GERMAN LOSSES THREE MILLIONS

LONDON, June 11.—Germany up to the end of May had lost 2,924,586 soldiers, of whom 734,412 were killed, according to a British official tabulation of the German casualty lists given out here to-day. The compilation did not include German losses in naval engagements or in the fighting in the German colonies.

The British official statement quotes the German official casualty lists for the month of May as placing the total German losses in killed, prisoners and wounded at 102,507. This number, it is pointed out, brings the German total losses, exclusive of naval and colonial casualties, to 2,924,586. The German figures in the May list as enumerated in the British account, are as follows:

Dead, 22,471; wounded, 72,075; prisoners and missing, 7961; total, 102,507.

The German official lists of casualties up to the end of May gives these totals:

Dead, 734,412; wounded, 1,861,652; prisoners and missing, 338,522; total, 2,924,586.

SLANDERER OF DEAD, SAYS MAIL OF HUGHES

Ottawa, June 12.—The Montreal Daily Mail (Conservative) publishes this morning a bitterly seething editorial on the statement of General Hughes concerning the untenability of the Ypres salient under caption. "Slanderer of the Dead."
"The Dead," says the Mail, "tell no tales, and with Kitchener sleeping his last sleep in the Atlantic, such slanders are incapable of first-hand refutation. They are slanders, nevertheless, cowardly, contemptible slanders, which bring shame to the author, as they do to the country for which he officially speaks."

"The Minister of Militia says in as many words that Kitchener was incompetent, that the strategic values of positions on the eastern front were unknown to him; that he held the Ypres salient for sentimental reasons, and that therefore the blood of the brave men, who have fallen in the fight for this territory is on Kitchener's head."

"It is to be particularly noted that Hughes' claim to have left nothing but a verbal record of his intervention—the same kind of records that were left by Allison in his fuse transactions, to which Mr. Justice Duff made scathing reference. Two hours would have sufficed to set forth in writing the arguments Hughes claims to have submitted verbally to Lord Kitchener. He did not spare those two hours for a task which he now tells the people of Canada was a matter of life and death to the Canadian battalions holding the Ypres salient. His indictment of Kitchener therefore becomes a still more damning indictment of himself."

"Those who know Sir Sam Hughes will find no difficulty in reaching a conclusion. They will stamp the story of his interview with Lord Kitchener as the crudest sort of fiction. The character of Britain's late War Minister is pretty well known and if Sir Sam Hughes had undertaken to give him lessons in military strategy he would have been more likely to indulge in strong language than in tears."

"The whole concoction has its inspiration in the desire of Sir Sam Hughes to capitalize Canadian losses on the battlefield. It is a belated card played in the Allison scandals in the hope that it may help to turn the scale of public opinion in his favor. To the end that Allison's predatory activities may be excused the dead Kitchener is defamed. To the end that the Hughes-Allison partnership may be robbed of its right perspective. Canadian casualties are exploited as if they were a marketable commodity."

PRINTER'S INK

Printer's ink is a combination of lamp black and brains which makes dollars grow in place of dimes. If it had not been for the judicious use of printer's ink and the Cardiff giant P. Tarnum would never have been heard outside of his front yard and John Wanamaker would still be doing business in a hat box, and a turn-over of $1,000 per annum.

Printer's ink is the cheapest form of publicity known, next to telling a secret to one's wife, and yet there have been thousands of men who never found it out until it was too late to make terms with the referee in bankruptcy. All along the high-way of life are scattered the whitening skeletons of promising business ventures which started out with a large bank balance and no other form of publicity except regular attendance upon the meetings of the official board. One by one the proprietors discovered that they were catering largely to their immediate relatives and a willing class of trade with genial manners but no collateral, and before long the community was shocked by a dull, muffled explosion caused by a sheriff's sale, notice coming in contact with a cylinder press.

Nearly all of the merchants who have failed because people could not remember whether they were still in business did not use any form of printer's ink except the rubber stamp. The rubber stamp is all right in its place, but as a means of getting business it is as helpless as a one-legged man on a milk stool. Nobody ever heard of a rubber stamp going out into the county and dragging in a bunch of rural customers who can tell a bargain without being laid open just above the eyes with a club. The man who relies upon the rubber stamp and the fact that he married into the Smith family, as a substitute for printer's ink, will be able to hold his annual clearance sale without suffocating any of his trade.

All of our great merchant princes landed in the king row by buying huge gobs of printer's ink and spreading it over two pages crammed full of lingerie cuts and enticing price figures. The automobile industry owes more to printer's ink than it does to the fitful self-starter, which sometimes fits and sometimes starts. In view of these plain statements of undying truth, the jury will now retire and render judgment upon the good citizen, kind neighbor and loyal friend who says it doesn't pay to advertise and knows, because he never tried it.

Gait of the Gorilla.

The gorilla has not only a crouching habit, but he walks on all four of his legs and has the motion of most quadrupeds, using his right arm and left leg at the same time, and alternates with the left arm and right leg. It is not exactly a walk or a trot, but a kind of ambling gait, while the chimpanzee uses his arms as crutches, but lifts one foot from the ground a little in advance of the other. He does not place the palm of the hand on the ground, but uses the back of the fingers from the second joint.

There's This Difference.

BECAUSE :

1. We must keep our Streets safe.
2. The saving in Street Expenditure, by Good Roads, for ten years will pay debt and interest.
3. The Street Expenditure will be reduced from $1,000 to $1,500 per annum, and this will cover payments on Debenture without extra taxation.
4. The work will be done under the supervision of a Government Engineer and the County Road Engineer.
5. The Council undertake to secure the services of an Expert Road Builder to take full charge of the construction.
6. The Council are being billed for damages for breakages, caused by bad roads, at each meeting of the Council, and they will increase.
7. The ordinary way of spending money on Streets is money wasted.
8. If the Government grant a rebate of $2,000 or $2,500 on expenditure upon these Roads the debt will be $7,500 or $8,000, not $10,000.

You are asked by the Council to tell them by your vote what to do, and if you still want to continue the old plan and enjoy, as heretofore, bad roads, the Council will carry out your wishes.

I hereby call a Public Meeting, and you are invited to attend a Public Meeting on Friday Evening, June 16th, at 7 o'clock, in the Town Hall, called to discuss this By-Law.

SYNOPSIS.

Dudley Larnigan, district attorney, attacks the liquor and vice trusts. He is killed by an agent of a secret society, the committee of fifteen. His son, Bruce Larnigan, is elected district attorney and takes up the fight. Bruce is in love with Dorothy Maxwell, whose father is head of the insurance trust.

Bruce Larnigan is decoyed to an evil resort in an effort to frame him up. He has the police commissioner present. A fire starts in a tenement. Larnigan saves the children of Dow, one of the conspirators. This man agrees to expose the trust. He is murdered by the gang.

Stanford Stone, head of the graft syndicate, insists Larnigan must be killed. Gunmen are posted in the park to kill Larnigan in his automobile. Dorothy Maxwell, over the dictaphone, hears the plot. Two more conspirators are killed and Larnigan again escapes.

BRUCE LARNIGAN, despite his successes over the graft syndicate since his election as district attorney, began to feel, after his miraculous escape from the plot to kill him in an explosion in the new subway, that his chances of success along the lines he had so far followed were almost hopeless.

Gradually, it seemed to him, tremendous forces were being arrayed against him. The whole power of the city administration was on the side of the enemy. The mayor, with all the departments he employed, showed open antagonism. The newspapers, with the single exception of the Independent, were either openly hostile or sneeringly indifferent. A great many people who, it seemed to him, should give him enthusiastic support were decidedly lukewarm in their attitude. To Dorothy Maxwell, his fiancée and practically the only person in whom he was now able to confide, since he did not want to worry his mother

"He hasn't given up," he said. "Don't be fooled for a minute by his resignation. That's just a blid. He's going to keep on fighting, and it's more important than ever to put him out of the way. I know, for instance, that he's going to Chicago tomorrow to try to get evidence against Dodson and his grain shortage. Black's gone, but I've got another man to follow him."

So it came about that there traveled with Bruce, following him as closely as his own shadow, a desperado known to the police of a score of cities as Red Mike. Mike meant to earn his money.

With Bruce gone, Stanford Stone left no move unmade in New York that might help to achieve his object. His first blow was struck at the Independent. A hint was enough. With one accord advertisers withdrew their support until the paper faced a staggering loss. And Stone went further. His agents approached stockholders, who, frightened by the loss of earnings, were glad to sell their holdings. So Stone came into control of a great block of Independent stock and was able to apply for a receivership and so force the suspension, for a time at least, of the paper's publication.

At his instance, too, suits were brought against Bruce for criminal libel and for heavy damages by the men he had accused in connection with the traction trust exposure. These were strike suits, which could not succeed when they were brought to trial, but it was not Stone's purpose to let them come to trial. They served as an excuse for attaching Bruce's bank account and his home, and this was done. Bruce's mother was terrified by threats of ejectment from her home, and Stone relied upon her pleadings to induce Bruce to abandon his fight, even if his well laid plans to put Bruce out of the way should not succeed.

Even so, however, Stone was not content. He felt that Bruce still pos-his cause; the facts would speak for themselves. And he had a small camera with him, with which he took photographs of the dumping.

It was that, however, which was his undoing. He had to expose himself as he took the pictures, and some keen eye among the men saw him. In a moment he was dragged from the boat.

"It's a spy!" cried some burly ruffian.

And a moment later Bruce was fighting for his life. He fought well, but the odds were too great. He was overpowered in no time and savagely beaten. But then the plotters made a fatal mistake. Left alone Bruce might soon have died. But they threw him overboard.

The cold water revived him to some extent, and he was able to cling to a floating spar that came providentially within his reach. And an hour later he was spied from the deck of a yacht and picked up. He was unconscious when he was dragged on board. When he came to an hour later a strange man bent over his cot.

"Are you Bruce Larnigan," he said hoarsely, "like the papers in your pocket say?"

"I am," said Bruce, astonished at the other's emotion.

"Bruce—I'm Tom—you're my brother!" said the stranger.

It was a wonderful tale they made of it, between them. Tom left home in a fit of boyish passion years before. He had disappeared, and the family had long since believed him dead.

"I didn't have the heart to go home a failure, Bruce," he confessed after he had heard Bruce's story. "But, by the Lord, I'll go home now and do the work you set out to do! You'll be in a hospital for a spell, old chap, and you're lucky at that. But leave things to me. I'll get through somehow."

So Tom went east in Bruce's place. He carried a letter to Dorothy Maxwell, and he carried also an absolute determination to defeat the graft syndicate and do Bruce's work until Bruce recovered.

But his arrival at home dismayed him. He learned of his mother's sufferings, and he learned, too, that Dorothy Maxwell, the girl Bruce loved and trusted, was engaged to Stanford Stone.

"I'll play a lone hand, then," he said defiantly to himself. "I'll not deliver Bruce's letter. But I'll get this man practically the only person in whom he was now able to confide, since he did not want to worry his mother with the details of his troubles, he told of his growing feeling that he was on the wrong road.

"We thought it was a wonderful thing when I was elected district attorney, dear," he said to her. "But the office has tied my hands again and again. Things that I could do if I were a private citizen I am barred from even attempting. Just for one thing—this graft conspiracy, I am convinced, is country wide.

"It isn't confined to New York alone. But as district attorney I can't go outside the city. My jurisdiction stops there."

"But you can go outside to get evidence," she suggested.

"The minute I do that they'll accuse me of neglecting my duty to pursue a fantastic conspiracy that, they say, has no existence at all except in my own brain. The best thing they say about me is that I'm visionary—a lunatic! Most of them say, whether they actually believe it or not, that I'm a crook."

"It's an outrage!" said Dorothy, with flashing eyes.

"Well, what do you think? It seems to me that I ought to resign as district attorney at once. I've been talking to Bart Nash. He's the editor of the Independent, you know—the man who gave Jim Stevens a job when Jim was fired for helping me to get the goods on the traction grafters."

"What does he say?"

"He agrees with me—that I ought to resign. He has promised me the support of his paper if I undertake to carry on the fight by a direct appeal to the people. That's my chance as I see it—to get the people stirred up, so that they will really demand action. So far they don't believe in me. But I can make them do it, I'm sure."

"Then if he thinks that and you feel as you do, I think you ought to resign," said Dorothy. "It's you that have got to make the decision. Bruce, I'm with you whatever you do!"

"That settles it," said Bruce. "I thought you'd agree with me. I shall resign at once. And the first move in my new fight will be against the grain trust."

"I didn't know there was one."

"There is, and a particularly mean one! It's responsible for the rise in the price of bread. There's plenty of grain, but they're creating an artificial shortage to send up prices. There's no reason at all for the rise. It's the worst sort of crookedness. I shall go to Chicago at once. That's the place where I can get the evidence, though it's St. John Dodson, right here in New York, who is my final quarry."

"Mr. Dodson!" said Dorothy, deeply shocked. "Why, he's one of papa's best friends!"

"That's just the trouble," said Bruce grittingly. "It's because men who are universally supposed to be honorable and decent, and who occupy fine and high positions, are at the bottom of all the crookedness that it's so hard for me to reach them."

Stanford Stone, the secret head of the graft syndicate and Bruce's great enemy, was not deceived by Bruce's resignation of his office, which filled some of Stone's associates with delight.

"Leave things to me. I'll get through somehow," said Tom.

essed one thing that he coveted—the love of Dorothy Maxwell. The engagement of the two had not been announced, but it was a more or less open secret. And now Stone, relying upon his hold over Roger Maxwell, her father, ventured openly to go to Dorothy and ask her to marry him. He was promptly refused, but would not take his answer. He wanted reasons, and Dorothy reluctantly told him of the plot to kill Bruce that she had overheard by means of the dictaphone in his office. To her amazement, Stone made no denial.

"I am his enemy," he said coolly. "I admit it. What of it? Your own father is associated with me. Larnigan's success would mean even more to him than to me."

"I don't believe you!" cried Dorothy desperately.

But she did. It explained so much that had troubled and mystified her. And Roger Maxwell, when she begged him to deny what Stone had said, couldn't do it. Indeed, he let her see that he was, to some extent at least, in Stone's power. It was a dreadful dilemma that Dorothy faced, with Bruce a thousand miles away, engaged, as she knew, in a bitter and perilous struggle.

And, even so, she did not know how great were the perils that dogged Bruce's trail. Red Mike, like some skulking beast of prey, waited for his chance to strike. A dozen times he held his hand, inspired by the animal cunning that was his, waiting to make sure.

Meanwhile Bruce found plenty of evidence. He was disturbed by the news that came to him from Bart Nash and Jim Stevens, but decided that it was better for him to stick to his own part of the work instead of going back to help them. He felt that he was on the trail of real facts, which would prove terribly damaging to the enemy.

At last there came the chance he had waited. A man he had bribed told him of a plan to send a schooner out on Lake Michigan from Chicago heavily laden with grain.

"Go along," he told Bruce. "You'll see something worth while."

And Bruce did. Concealed in a boat, he saw the crew, under orders from the captain, dumping the perfectly good grain into the lake. It was so that Dodson's men were creating the shortage he was using as his excuse for raising the price of bread to the poor! This Bruce knew would serve defiantly to himself. "I'll not deliver Bruce's letter. But I'll get this man Dodson by myself."

Chance guided him to a meeting of the poor held in protest against the rise in the price of bread. Tom Larnigan seized his chance. In a moment he displaced the speaker.

"This is a time to act—not to talk!" he cried. "Follow me! I'll lead you to the man who raised the price of bread!"

With a roar like that of a pack of wolves the crowd followed him, growing greater at every block, until at last it stormed the doors of the great office building in which St. John Dodson had his office, surged up to his office, and beat down all guards and barriers until it was at his very door. Then Tom went in alone to find the great man cowering at his desk.

"Shall I let them in," he asked, "or will you yield, you cur?"

"I've ordered the price back to the old figures!" cried the frightened Dodson. "For God's sake take them away!"

Tom believed him. He told the crowd they had won their fight. And, even as he spoke, a shot rang out. Dodson had killed himself.

At once Tom and his mother went to Chicago, to find Bruce somewhat improved. He smiled as he heard of Tom's first blow at the forces of graft.

Romans and the Candle.

According to Plutarch, the ancient Romans would not extinguish a candle, letting it burn out instead. The reason, he states, was that they considered fire an animal, for it needs nourishment, moves itself, grows with added food and when extinguished gives a gasp as if slain. The Romans were opposed to ending the life of so useful a creature. Probably they changed their minds quickly respecting this when a house got afire.

SOWING OATS.

Oats grow best when sown
with a drill in a fine and firm seed bed about two or three inches deep. Fall plowed land is to be preferred. Seeding should be done early.

Oats follow a cultivated crop in a rotation. Fall plowing is best. If the situation demands spring plowing the earlier it is done the better. Following spring plowing the soil must be worked back so as to unite the furrow slice and the "pan." A good seed bed can be made on clean land where corn was grown last year by two diskings
and a harrowing with a slant tooth harrow.

Drilling gives a more even stand than broadcast sowing and covers the seed to a more nearly uniform depth. Less seed also is required in drilling. The seed should be covered usually about one and a half inches deep. The rate of seeding should be two bushels to the acre under average soil conditions or two and a half bushels on heavy soils.

Every two or three years oat
seed should be treated for smut
to hold the disease in check.
This year is a good time to begin. A formaldehyde solution will probably save your field several bushels an acre.

A germination test is always advisable, but especially so this year, for tests are showing up poorly. Rigid grading with a fanning mill will also help to get a high test.—C. P. Bull, University Farm, St. Paul.

PLANTING HARDY STOCK.

Work on Small Fruit and Trees Should Begin in Early Spring.

Asparagus, rhubarb, strawberries, raspberries, blackberries, currants and all the small fruits, hardy roses and shrubs, hardy perennial plants, lilies, iris and all fruit and ornamental trees
can be planted as soon as the ground
can be worked in the spring.

In planting trees and shrubs make the holes larger in circumference and deeper than necessary. Loosen up the soil to a good depth and pulverize it.
Mix well rotted manure with the soil
in the bottom of the hole and cover
this lightly with soil, as no manure should touch the roots. Trim off broken roots with a sharp knife, making a clean cut. Spread out the roots carefully in a natural manner and fill in the soil, tamping it firmly as the filling process advances. Water thoroughly before the hole is filled, using several pails of water. Most trees and shrubs should be pruned back well before planting. Trees properly set out will mature much earlier and make finer specimens than trees carelessly planted. Gardeners doing the work will bear close watching. Not every gardener is a careful worker and, al-

VALUE OF FRUIT TREES.

They Have Their Mission Both For Beauty and Utility.

Fruit trees are too often overlooked
when planning for trees and shrubs, writes Edward K. Parkinson in the New York Evening Post. Yet surely they have their mission in the economy of the garden and should possess an interest for the owner from early spring until late autumn not only as revenue yielders, but as a delightful phase in the various aspects of nature, which produces them in sizes to fit any garden. There are the standard sized trees for large orchards, the half standards for medium sized grounds and the dwarf varieties for

be trained into any shape desired.
Peaches may be set twelve feet apart
if kept well headed in, but if allowed to reach their full development eighteen feet spacing should be provided.
The fact that splendid young fruit trees may be had for 50 cents apiece brings all these varieties of delectable fruit within the reach of almost any gardener.

Care must be taken to set the trees
out absolutely straight, for not only does this enhance the looks of a garden or orchard, but it facilitates cultivation as well. The best way to do this is to lay a garden line from one base to another, then drive stakes the proper distances along the line. This done, take a board four feet long by four or five inches wide and cut three V shaped notches in it, one in either end and one exactly in the middle. Start at the first peg (not the one to which the cord is tied) and lay the board so that the peg fits in the center notch;
then remove this stake and put it in the notch made in one end of the board and set another stake in the notch at the opposite end and continue this double staking until the row or orchard is all staked out.

While stones have been used for bracing at the front and they give good service, the use of two other larger stones farther from the base and attached by wire to the other posts adjacent to the corner post will materially assist in lightening the burdens the corner post must bear. Further description of how this is done is not necessary, since the sketch shows this very plainly.—American Agriculturist.

Ruined by Rust.

[W. E. Edmondson, Colorado station.]
It is a proved fact that machinery,
where exposed to moisture, rusts out very rapidly. In fact, rust does more damage to the exposed machinery than the work which the implement is called upon to do.

This is a needless waste, however,
because rust can practically be overcome by taking the proper care of the machine when not in use.

Farmers could get more than twice as much wear out of most implements if they were housed properly. This alone will not suffice in some climates.
A very good way to keep the rust from attacking parts exposed to moisture is to coat all the iron with a very cheap oil. This oil should be thick and heavy, so that when applied to the iron
it will not run off.

This coating of oil will keep all of the moisture away from the iron and will prevent rust from starting.

ple, dwarf apple trees may be grown in large tubs and stored in the cellar

plish this successfully the tubs should be set in a box sufficiently large to provide for a foot of earth between the tub and the sides, the bottom and top of the box, which will prevent the roots from being frozen. Pears, apples and peaches may be grown on an espalier trellis, on a wall or on the side of a building. The north side of the garden is an excellent place for a row of dwarf and semidwarf fruit trees.

Pears should be set out ten feet apart, apples eight or ten feet, semi-dwarf cherries also eight or ten feet,

It might also be well to add that,
where one is planning to set out an orchard of an acre, apple trees should be spaced forty feet apart each way for the best results, and between the rows either vegetables or fruit trees
which mature early, known as fillers,
may be set, but they should be removed as soon as the permanent trees and prolific these fillers may appear to be, it is imperative that they be removed; otherwise the other trees will be injured by being overcrowded.

Time Lost In Plowing For Oats.

Does it pay to plow ground for oats
and to clean the seed for this crop?
These questions are answered by F. A.
Welton, associate agronomist of the Ohio experiment station, who says that farmers are frequently misled by such practices. Six years' results at the experiment station show that disked land has given greater yields than plowed soil and the cost of preparing the seed bed has been much less. The only objection to disking is on land where weeds are unusually abundant or on exceptionally heavy, clay soil.

Cleaning seed oats to remove all the small grains has likewise been unprofitable. Yields are increased so slightly by repeated cleaning of the oats in a fanning mill that Mr. Welton advises only the removal of dirt, broken straw and weed seeds in the grain.

the affable stranger.

"I'm half dead."

"Then I called in the nick of time.

Impossible To Get So Much Motor Car Value For The Money

WE FIND this is the attitude of many people who come into our salesroom—before they know anything about the Maxwell.

Not until the Maxwell is shown and demonstrated to them—until they sit in it and examine the finish—until they ride in it—or perhaps not until they drive it themselves, do they realize what a tremendous value is offered in the Maxwell car.

It is not unusual that Maxwell value should not be known to everyone, because it is uncommon to find such a car for a good margin more than the Maxwell price.

The Maxwell stands absolutely alone in a highly competitive field, for the amount of value it offers for the price.

Appearance—The lines of the Maxwell are decidedly attractive. There is no break in the Motor—The engine in the Maxwell is equalled by any other four-cylinder size. And we know of larger and more cars that have less able power plants. The Maxwell engine carries its load through rain or over the steepest grades without s

Quality—The materials in the Maxwell are the best that can be bought and the craftsmanship that turns them into finished products is excellent. It is only the large production of Maxwell factories that makes it possible to get such quality of materials and workmanship at a car selling at the Maxwell price.

Economy—With its other attractions the Maxwell is a most economical car. Owners get 22 to 25 miles per Imperial gallon of gasoline and 8,000 to 12,000 mile tires. And the car is so durably built that the expense is negligible.

decadently attractive. There is no broken contour from the radiator to the back of the car. The fenders are gracefully shaped. All metal parts are enameled or nickel-plated. The upholstery is deep and well-finished. From any angle it is a car that the owner can be proud of.

We are sure you want a car such as described the Maxwell to be. If you have a few minutes of your time we are sure to convince you that the Maxwell Car is of great value. Come in today.

housewife is the hardest worked. She has so much to attend to, with very little help. Her work can be lightened if she knows the value of system and she should try and take a short rest in the daytime.
A physician who became famous almost around the world, Doctor Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., the specialist in woman's diseases, for many years practiced medicine in a farming district. He there observed the lack of system in the planning of the work.

If it is a headache, a backache, a sensation of irritability or twitching and uncontrollable nervousness, something must be wrong with the head or back, a woman naturally says, but all the time the real trouble very often centers in the organs. In nine cases out of ten the seat of the difficulty is here, and a woman should take rational treatment for its cure. The disorder should be treated steadily and systematically with Dr.
Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

For diseases from which women suffer storative. During the last fifty years it has banished from the lives of tens of thousands of women the pain, worry, misery

Curling-Bowling By-Law.

The property of the Curling Club was recently destroyed by fire and the Club has re-organized and intends to erect a substantial rink and club house on the lot immediately west of the Court House property. Instead of asking the council for some assistance by way of a grant, it was decided to ask the Council to assist in a small extent by way of fixing the assessment on the property to be acquired at $500.00, except for school purposes. The lands at present are assessed at $200.00, so that the corporation, if the rink is constructed, will have in any event an increased revenue of taxes from these lands as the present assessment will be more than doubled. The property will also pay the school rate on the full assessed value. This enterprise is not being promoted by curlers only, but by all the business men and those interested in the welfare of the town. The election is on Monday next, come out and vote for the by-law.

rank of the 146th Battalion and Justice of the Peace Hunter, of Kingston, sent him to jail for two months.

Chief-of-Police, F. W. Barrett, this week received notice of his appointment as Local Agent of the Children's Aid Society. There is no salary attached to the office, but he is allowed only actual travelling expenses.

Private Lord, of Brockville, discharged and pensioned as a result of wounds received in the battle of St. Julien, tried to re-enlist at Kingston in the artillery, but had to be turned down. He was willing to give up his pension to get into the fight again.

Thos. Lennon, the man on whom was found a varied assortment of jewellery, when arrested for theft from Wallace's Drug Store, was let off on suspended sentence by the Police Magistrate. Lennon is wanted in London for the theft of the jewellery and was remanded to gaol to await an officer to take him to London.

The "U.E. Loyalist" Chapter, I.O. D.E. and its Committee of Women's Patriotic Service and Red Cross work, desire to tender their thanks to the Mayor and Council of Napanee, for granting the use of the Town Hall free of expense on the occasion of Mrs. Willoughby Cummings' lecture on Friday last. The sincere thanks of the above organizations are also due to Mrs. W. J. Campbell and Mr. Jack Simpson for some special work—also to the ladies' who so well arranged the platform, and to all who contributed to the successful result of the evening.

The June issue of Rod and Gun is on the news stand and its list of contents is of interest as usual to the sportsman and lover of life in the open. An article on the Nipigon and Canoe Routes to the East is the leader in this issue which contains among other stories "Bjornsen's Grizzly," an unfortunate encounter with an enraged grizzly; "Fisherman's Luck"; Trout Fishing on the Stave River; an article on the destruction of Fish and Game in the Laurentian Mountains descriptive of the damage that is being done in that region by residents who are ignorant or criminally careless as to the game laws; besides well conducted departments devoted to guns and ammunitions, fishing notes, the kennel, the trap, etc. Rod and Gun, the sportsman's magazine, is issued by W. J. Taylor, Ltd., Woodstock, Ont.

An apprehension on the part of many Americans that if they come to Canada they might be conscripted into the army is indicated in numerous inquiries to the Government. It has brought forth an official statement emphasizing the fact that there is no conscription in Canada. Furthermore, that no measures taken for recruiting the forces either have been or will be applied to any persons not ordinarily resident in the Dominion, nor is it the intention to ask for volunteers, except from among British subjects resident in Canada. The military service act, under which conscription is applied in Great Britain, affects only persons ordinarily resident there. Americans and British subjects who reside in the United States and who wish to visit Canada will find no more trouble on the border than they have experienced in the past. The immigration authorities suggest, however, that naturalized Americans whose country of origin is at war with the British Empire should bring along their naturalization certificates.

Women's Patriotic Service and Red Cross Work

Through the "U. E. Loyalist" Chapter, I.O.D.E.

The address by Mrs. Willoughby Cummings D.C.L. on Friday evening of last week, was a much appreciated event, and was well attended by an interested audience.

Mrs. Cummings remarks were mainly in the interests of recruiting, and her arguments were well and forcefully laid before her listeners, urging all women with many strong appeals, not to stand in the way of the enlistment
of eligible men.

The speaker of the evening also enlarged upon, and stated as facts, certain rumours, which have for some time been prevalent, regarding the drilling, uniforming and arming of Germans in the United States, and of the inadequate existing American Army to oppose any attempt, should it be made, to invade Canada! The assertion was also made, that there would be no conscription in Canada,
and more than likely not even registration! Some information was given regarding the knitting of the ever necessary socks, also some details regarding the Home Battalion, (the 146th) now at Barrieffield.

The Rev. J. H. H. Coleman moved
an appreciative vote of thanks to Mrs.
Cummings for her kindness in coming to Napanee, and giving such an interesting address, which was seconded by Mrs. Edward Wilson, and heartily endorsed by the audience, after which,
at the suggestion of Mrs. Harshaw, Regent of the "U.E. Loyalist" Chapter, I.O.D.E. who also acted as chairman, the meeting which resulted in a gratifying amount for patriotic work, closed with the hearty singing of the National Anthem.
